

Giving Gardens Help Cincinnatians In Need

Lisa Benson
Online Managing Editor
Connect with me

Wednesday, March 10, 2010, 1:15pm EST

Print Email RSS Feed Share Comments

A Lebanon-based organic nursery and garden company is once again teaming up with The Healing Center in Springdale to give a little help to local families who are having trouble putting food on the table.

Marvin's Organic Gardens is spearheading a project called "Giving Gardens." Modeled after the Victory Gardens of World War II, the effort encourages gardeners to plant a little more than they need and donate the extra crops to The Healing Center. The center is a nonprofit that provides food and clothing, job skills training and job search assistance and other programs to those in need.

"It's such a back-to-basics concept," said Marvin Duren, owner of Marvin's Organic Gardens, in a press release. "This is a simple yet profound way to impact the lives of others, and we are happy to head up the project. Everyone can choose to make a difference and help feed the hungry."

This is the second year for the Giving Gardens project. Click here for more information.

Categories: Agriculture

Tags: Gardening, Nonprofits

Companies: Marvin's Organic Gardens, The Healing Center

People: Marvin Duren